

RESEARCH

Our research program, with its collaborative effort and capacity building approach, covers a broad range of remote health topics and is responsive to community and health service needs.

We have organised our research efforts around the themes of:

- Workforce and Health Services
- Clinical Practice
- Education and Training

National and local collaborations help to sustain and grow our research program.

We build partnerships with communities and organisations so that research activities are guided by community knowledge and they benefit from the results of our research as well as from involvement in the research process.

SEMINARS

The Centre for Remote Health has an active seminar series covering a diverse range of topics related to health issues affecting people in remote and very remote Indigenous communities.

The seminars also provide an opportunity to disseminate information from our research projects.

REMOTE PRIMARY HEALTH CARE MANUALS

As part of the Centre for Remote Health's commitment to quality primary health care in remote and very remote Australia we facilitate the ongoing production of the suite of Remote Primary Health Care Manuals (RPHCM).

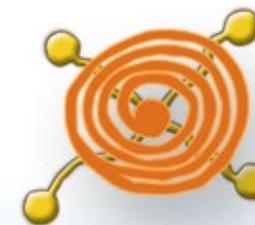

The RPHCMs are a set of clinical guidelines grounded in evidence and the realities of remote practice. They are widely used across remote and very remote Australia.

UNIVERSITY

WHO WE ARE

The Centre for Remote Health (CRH) is a University Department of Rural Health (UDRH). We are funded by the Commonwealth Department of Health under the Rural Health Multidisciplinary Training Program (RHMTTP).

From our humble beginnings in 1999, CRH has grown to become an international leader in the provision of remote and very remote health education, training and research that is responsive to community needs.

OUR MISSION

Our mission is to contribute to the improved health outcomes of people in remote and very remote communities, through the provision of high quality tertiary education, training and research focusing on the discipline of Remote Health. In particular, CRH contributes to improved Indigenous health outcomes through partnerships with Aboriginal communities.

EDUCATION

Our postgraduate award courses and professional development short courses are designed to equip health professionals with the necessary skills and knowledge to provide effective health services to people living in rural, remote and very remote Australia.

Our Placement Team supports health students on placement in Central Australia.

POSTGRADUATE AWARD COURSES

Flinders University offers the following postgraduate award courses through the Centre for Remote Health:

- Graduate Certificate in Remote Health Practice
- Graduate Diploma in Remote Health Practice
- Master of Remote and Indigenous Health
