

JBI COMPREHENSIVE SYSTEMATIC REVIEW TRAINING PROGRAM

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This program is useful for students commencing their research degree, clinicians with clinical questions to investigate, academics wanting to conduct reviews or supervise students conducting reviews, or anyone with a plan to conduct their own systematic review of any kind of evidence.

ABOUT THIS COURSE

This systematic review training program provides practical and theoretical introductions to the synthesis of evidence using Joanna Briggs Institute (JBI) methods. The course follows the process of conducting a systematic review, from developing a clear review question, to constructing complex searches for relevant literature, appraising research studies and synthesising evidence arising from research.

On completion, participants will be a JBI Certified Reviewer with access to the state-of-the-art JBI-SUMARI review software, which streamlines the process of conducting a systematic review.

The JBI Comprehensive Systematic Review Training Program is a three or five-day program depending on your research needs or areas of interest.

Successful completion of Module 1 is a prerequisite for Modules 2 and/or 3.

- Module 1: Introduction to the Joanna Briggs Institute and systematic reviews
- Module 2: Quantitative methods and reviews of effectiveness
- Module 3: Qualitative methods and reviews of meaningfulness, feasibility and appropriateness
